MAURICE HATTER

Maurice Hatter, who is one of the staunchest supporters of the British Association of Friends of the University of Haifa, is unique in the business world. At the age of 37 he went into semi-retirement. The attraction of business and enterprise, however, soon drew him back into intensive action.

Maurice Hatter owns and heads I.M.O. Precision Controls Limited and I.M.O. Electronics. These two companies are the largest suppliers of automation and electronic components in the United Kingdom.

Maurice Hatter has contributed greatly to industrial advancement and expansion in Britain. An executive member of World Ort and of its branches in Britain, he has also worked for the development and fostering of technological education in Britain and in Israel.

As a result of his great interest in the sea, yachts, diving and archaeology, a strong bond eventuated between Maurice Hatter and the Leon Recanati Center for Maritime Studies of the University of Haifa. His generous support of the Center is continuous. In addition, he is involved with the activities of the Department of Maritime Civilizations, participating in its sea journeys and archaeological excavations.

Keenly aware of the financial requirements and needs of the students, Maurice Hatter munificently contributes to overcoming these problems.
